PART OF WASHINGTON CITY.

CAPITOL OF THE UNITED STATES. "Hail Columbia."

People sometimes say we have no right to interfere for the abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia. Now what are the facts in the case? Article 1, Sec. 8, of the Constitution (see above) gives Congress "power to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever, over such district."

But the terms of Cession! On the 23d of December, 1788, Maryland passed an Act to cede to the Congress 'of the United States, any district in the State, not exceeding ten miles square, which the Congress may fix upon, and accept for the Seat of Government of the United States;' and this with no proviso. On the 3d of December, 1789, Virginia did the same; and in these words, "And the same is hereby forever ceded and relinquished to the Congress and Government of the United States, in full and absolute right, and exclusive jurisdiction, as well of soil as of persons residing or to reside therein, pursuant to the tenor and manner of the eighth section of the first article of the Constitution." This was accompanied with a proviso touching the "Soil," "That no thing herein contained shall be construed, to vest in the United States any right of property in the soil, or to affect the rights of individuals therein, otherwise than the same shall or may be transferred by such individuals." There was also the provision, "That the jurisdiction of the Laws of this Commonwealth, over persons and property of individuals residing within the limits of the cession, shall not cease; CONGRESS, having accepted the cession, shall, by law, provide for the government thereof, under their jurisdiction in manner provided by the Article of the Constitution before recited"—plainly implying that then the jurisdiction of the State Laws should cease, and Congress "exercise exclusive legislation" over persons and property, "IN ALL CASES WHATSOEVER." And July 16, 1790, Congress accepted the cession, providing that the Laws of the State should remain in force "until the time fixed on for the removal of the Government therein, and until Congress shall otherwise by law provide." It is therefore every Citizen's right, any duty to interfere for the Abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia.

[NOTE.—The Slave-coffle marching by the Capitol is not fiction, but literal fact. Dr. Torrey in his account of the "American Slave Trade," states on the authority of a Member of the House of Representatives, Mr. Ashmun, "That during the last Session of Congress, (1835-36,) as several Members were standing in the street near the new Capitol, a drove of manacled colored people were passing by, and when just opposite, one of them raising his manacles as high as he could reach, commenced singing the favorite National Song, 'Hail Columbia! happy land,' &c. Page 64.]

PUBLIC PRISONS IN THE DISTRICT.

Built by Congress with $15,000 of the People's money; perverted from the purposes for which they were built, and used by Slaveholders for the confinement of refractory Slaves, by licensed Slave-dealers as depots for their victims, and by kidnappers for the imprisonment of Free Americans, seized and sold to pay their jail fees!

JAIL IN ALEXANDRIA.

FACTS.

In 1828 Congress appropriated out of the public treasury $6000 "for the purpose of altering and repairing the jail in the city of Washington" and $20,000 to build "a county jail for the city and county of Alexandria."

In 1829 "the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled," empowered the Corporation of the City of Washington "to prescribe the terms and conditions upon which free negroes and mulattoes may reside in the city." On this authority, in May 1832, that Corporation enacted that "every free negro or mulatto, whether male or female, who may come to the City of Washington to reside, shall within thirty days, exhibit to the Mayor satisfactory evidence of his or her title to freedom to be recorded, and shall enter into bonds, with two freehold sureties, in the penalty of $500, conditioned on his or her good conduct, that they will not become chargeable to the Corporation for the space of twelve months"—the bond "to be renewed every year for THREE YEARS. On failure of this, he or she must depart the city or be committed to the workhouse not exceeding twelve months in any one imprisonment." And all negroes found residing in the city after the passage of this act who shall not be able to establish their title to freedom (except such as may be hired) shall be committed to the jail, as absconding slaves."

By this law color is made a crime, which first robs citizens of their constitutional as well as inalienable rights and is then taken as evidence that they are slaves; and then to crown all, a large posse of constables and other officers, some of them in the pay of government, are "charged" with the execution of the laws, and "forfeit and pay for every neglect or failure a fine not exceeding twenty dollars." City Laws, p. 198.

The result is that free citizens are often arrested, phrenzified in prison and then sold for their jail fees as SLAVES FOR LIFE. In 1828, Mr. Miner, of Penn. declared in Congress, that in 1826—7, no less than five persons were thus sold. In July, 1834, in a Washington paper months following "WAS committed to the prison of Washington Co. D. C., on the 19th day of May 1834, as a ran-away, a Negro man who calls himself DAVID PECK. He is 5 feet 9 inches high. Had on, when committed, a black skin, linen pantaloons, and straw hat. He says he is free."

JAIL IN WASHINGTON.—SALE OF A FREE CITIZEN TO PAY HIS JAIL FEES!

FACTS.

Keeper of the Prison of Washington County, District of Columbia,
For ALEXANDER, WINTERS, N. S. C.

The above is but a specimen. Four other persons, at least, who said they were free, have been advertised in a similar way within the last year. One keeper of the jail in Washington stated that in five years upwards of four hundred and fifty colored persons had been lodged there for such keeping, i. e. until they could be disposed of in the course of the slave trade;—besides nearly three hundred, who had been taken up and lodged there as runaways.

The above gives some idea of the interior of the prison in Washington. Rev. A. A. Phelps, of Boston, visited it in April 1834, and makes the following statement.

"There are in the prison 16 solitary cells on the lower floor, the debtor's and criminal's rooms being above. These cells are mostly used for the confinement of slaves lodged there by the masters as a punishment for some fault; of slaves "using the Northern freedom" as they termed it, and of colored persons, bond or free, arrested as runaways, or lodged there by the slave dealers. We found not less than thirteen individuals and belonged to Baltimore.... The owner or owners, are hereby requested to come forward, prove him, and take him away, or he will be sold for his prison and other expenses, as the LAW DIRECTS.

FACTS.

in them at this time, every one of whom claimed that, on our ground or another, they were entitled to their freedom. In one cell we found a Fanny Jackson, with three little children, one of them an infant at her breast. Her husband, also in the prison, was in a separate cell. They were claimed by one Ann Rockey, of London co., Va., but having been in Washington several years, contended by the master, they were using for their freedom under some act which entitled them to it. They had late in prison, awaiting their trial nine months. We spoke to the mother about her little ones, and we found she had indeed a mother's heart. The scene cannot be described.

"Rachel Turner was the occupant of another cell. She was young—had been owned for a limited time by Lewis Brearley, of Baltimore, and was to have been free in a year. Mrs. Brearley, (her husband being dead) sold her for that time, to a man, who either changed his name to that of Amos de Nunteel, or sold her a slave for life to another person of that name. He took her to Washington, and lodged her in the jail for 'safe keeping' till he should call for her. Nothing had been heard from him. Meanwhile the girl had been in the prison more than six months, and the keeper assured me that she would soon be sold, for her jail fees, as a slave, for life. The whole affair was doubtless a mere trick, to retain the law, and make her a slave for life.

"On returning from the prison, the lady who had accompanied me, and who had often aided the poor outcasts, said that her attention was first called to the subject by the following incident. Some seven years before, a poor colored man came to her door, walking on his knees—having lost his legs to the knee, and his arms also to the elbow. She asked him how it happened. He said he had been put in prison, as a runaway, though he was free, and the master was so sold, and his escaping so nearly, thereby across a blanket to throw over him,) that his limbs were frozen, and it became necessary to take them off to save his life. This was a free American, made a cripple for life, for the crime of having a colored skin, and to pay the United States for the expense of having suspected him to be a slave!

SLAVE HOUSE OF J. W. NEAL & CO.

FRANKLIN & ARMFIELD'S SLAVE PRISON.

This establishment was owned by W. Rabey, who is also engaged in the trade. In May 1834, a gentleman visited it and fell into conversation with the overseer of the pen. He heard the clanking of chains within the pen. "O," said the Overseer—himself a Slave, "I have seen fifty or sixty Slaves taken out of the pen, and the chains locked together in pairs, and driven off to the South—and how they would cry, and groan, and take on, and wring their hands, but the driver would put on the whip and tell them to shut up—or they would go off and hear it as well as they could."

The standing advertisement of this house is as follows:

"CASH FOR 200 NEGROES."

"We will give cash for two hundred likely young negroes, of both sexes, families included." Persons wishing to dispose of their slaves, will do well to give us a call, as we will give higher prices in cash than any other purchasers who are now, or may hereafter come into this market. All communications will meet attention. We can at all times be found at our residence on 7th street, immediately South of the Centre Market House, Washington, D. C."

"JOSEPH W. NEAL & CO."

Franklin and Armfield alone shipped to New-Orleans in the year 1834, according to their own statement, not less than 1000 Slaves. They own ships of about 100 to 250 tons burthen, running regularly every thirty days, during the trading season to New-Orleans, and carrying about one Slave to the ton. They thus advertise them:

"ALEXANDRIA AND NEW-ORLEANS PACKETS."

"Brig TRIBUNE, Captain Smith, and Brig UNCAS, Captain Beach, will resume their regular trips on the 20th October, one of which will leave this port every thirty days throughout the shipping season. They are vessels of the first class, commanded by experienced officers, and will at all times go up the Mississippi by steam, and every exertion used to promote the interests of shippers and comfort of passengers. Apply to the Captains on board, or to

"FRANKLIN & ARMFIELD."

"Alexandria, September 1, 1834."

In January 1834, J. Leavitt, Editor of the New-York Evangelist, visited the "TRIBUNE," then in port and preparing to sail with a cargo of human beings the next week. He thus describes it: "This hold is appropriated to the Slaves and is divided into two apartments. The after hold will carry about 60 women, and the other about 100 men. On unfavorable weather two platforms running the whole length, are raised a few inches, and the Jailor about half way up to the deck. They were shown I 5 or 6 feet deep. On them they lie, as close as they can stow away."

This establishment is in Alexandria. It is a handsome three story brick house, neatly painted, with green blinds, and the sign, FRANKLIN & ARMFIELD over the door. It has attached to it a large yard, perhaps 300 feet square, enclosed by a high close board fence nearly whitewashed, and filled with a most small buildings. Mr. Lewis visited it in 1834. He describes it thus: "It is on the pattern known in New-Orleans, and also other in Alexandria. The latter, says Mr. L. "politely invited us to go and see the Slaves. We were first taken out into a paved yard, 40 or 50 feet square, with a very high brick wall and about half of it covered with a roof. This yard is appropriated to the men. He ordered the men to be called out from the cellar where they sleep, and they soon came up, to the number of 80 or 90, and ranged themselves irregularly before us. While they were standing, he ordered the girls to be called out, when the door opened, and about 50 women and small children came in. They were all clothed decently in coarse but apparently comfortable garments. Some three or four had children, so young that they brought them in their arms; and I thought I saw in the faces of those mothers some indications of irrepressible feeling. It seemed to me that they hugged their little ones more closely, and that a cold pompousness stood on their foreheads, and I thought I saw tears too. There were in all about 20 children under 10 years of age.

The standing advertisement of this house in the Washington papers is as follows:—

"CASH FOR 400 NEGROES."

People of the United States, Congress alone possess the constitutional power to legislate for the District of Columbia; yet one hundred and sixty-three of your representatives are striving to perpetuate in the Capital of your Republic this system of robbery, cruelty and despotism. House of Representatives, 8th February 1836.—Certain petitions and resolutions respecting the Abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia were referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report, "THAT IN THE OPINION OF THIS HOUSE CONGRESS OUGHT NOT IN ANY WAY TO INTERFERE WITH SLAVERY IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA."
