

In the early to mid-nineteenth century, many cities and towns began publishing lists of their inhabitants and businesses that provided names, occupations, and street addresses. During the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, these publications began including sections arranged by street address and by telephone number. Separate cross-reference directories also began to appear with listings by street address and telephone number without the alphabetic name listing.

City directories contain a wealth of historical information about people, businesses, and civic organizations, enabling researchers to trace personal, social, and commercial changes through time. Although most city directories focus on larger cities and towns, many now include counties, smaller towns, and urbanized areas that surround metropolitan areas.

To see the most complete holdings for city directories for which the Library has current subscriptions, please do a subject or keyword search in the Library's online catalog using the name of the city, town, or county with the word "directories." For example: "Richmond, VA Directories"; "Shenandoah County, VA Directories"; or "Front Royal, VA Directories."
